'The frontier' is a concept with a broad field of meaning, expressing both barriers and areas of interpenetration of different cultures, religions, nations and ethnic groups, economic and legal systems. As a place, 'the frontier' is a particularly suitable context for the exchange of ideas and experiences, and if it takes place in an academic institution, it can become the nucleus of international scientific dialogue and local social impact. Jan Grodek State University in Sanok will once again become such a place during the 9th International Scientific Conference 'At the borderline of cultures and nations. Locals-Strangers-Others'.

The organizers invite researchers, educators and social ambassadors of multicultural borderland from Poland and abroad, interested in the issues of history, sociology, economy, pedagogy, culture and art of areas on the border of states and nationalities.
